The 2018 AAUS Diving for Science Symposium will be hosted by University of California Berkeley and University of California Davis in Tahoe City, CA from October 8-13, 2018. We welcome diving scientists, students, diving safety officers and anyone with an interest in diving science to participate in this event. The week will be filled with technical workshops ranging from AUP repair, PSI and DAN courses to diving workshops covering underwater archaeology, altitude diving and much more. Following opportunities for diving as well as social and networking events, we will wrap up the week with the national DSO meeting, a two-day science symposium, poster session, and annual awards banquet. Our venue for this year handles groups a little differently than in past years and we want you to be informed before you register and book lodging. All participants need to review the information below thoroughly and contact the AAUS office with any questions.
